HONGKONG, MARCH 16TH, 1868.

The census taken at the end of the past year, together with a great number of interesting tables, and a report on the subject from the Registrar-General, is published in the Gazette of Saturday, but this publication though dated Saturday, is as our readers are aware, only published late on Saturday evening, and indeed is seldom in our hands before Sunday morning. It is impossible therefore to reprint the returns this morning. The total population of Hongkong is estimated at 117,471, of which 2,151 are Europeans and Americans.

TO-MORROW, it appears, that the Chamber of Commerce is to take the Stamp Act into consideration, and prepare, it is to be presumed, some statement for the new Commission. No doubt, the Chamber will be well able to do this, and the fact that the commission includes the chairman of the Chamber, should be a guarantee that its remarks will meet with proper attention. At a meeting of that body the mercantile community will be ready enough, one would suppose, to come forward and hand in memoranda of all the annoyances they have suffered from the introduction of the Stamp Act, together with notes of anything they may have observed amongst their Chinese friends, calculated to illustrate the "defects in its working." These might be incorporated into a single report on the whole subject. In this way the matter might be effectively treated; more so than is possible for individual critics who deal with the whole ordinance. The defects which arise in the working of an act like this, arise over a very large surface. Only one or two particular cases may fall within the personal knowledge of individual men. The experience of a great number is required for the compilation of an effective act of impeachment. This must rest on facts, and not merely on arguments. There is the weakness of newspaper criticism directed against injurious legislation of this kind. It is easy to point out how this or that provision must, or would probably operate unfavorable against such and such interests, but the force of remonstrances like this is nothing compared with that of a practical committee, who can cite definite cases in support of every complaint.

There is, it must be admitted, this great difficulty in the way of any one who sets about drawing up a list of the defects in the Stamp Act. The great defect in the Stamp Act is the introduction of stamps, but arguments directed against the real point at issue will not be listened to by the commission. The real point to ascertain is whether the aggregate annoyance, injury to trade, and so forth, caused by the Stamp Act, does or does not outweigh the advantage of obtaining the amount of revenue which it brings in, but this point, as we say, cannot be dealt with by the commission. If it were made incumbent on the driver of a coach to tie his horses hind legs together, and after a little experience of the system he were set to report on the different kinds of rope he had been obliged to use, he would probably want to protest that the system of tying hind legs together was nothing but one gigantic defect from first to last. However, a well conducted commission would refuse to hear him on that subject. They would persist in assuming the fundamental necessity of tying hind legs; and if the indignant coachman were driven to confess that a rope he could think of would be less objectionable than the one in use, they would no doubt make a gratifying report to the effect, that the system worked admirably as it was, on the testimony of the very people concerned. It does not require any great sagacity to apply the supposition to the present case. The commission, if it insists on dealing with defects of detail, will produce a report which will be very far from giving a complete picture of the Stamp Act and its operation. It is apparently called together to consider "defects in the working" of the act, and not the principle of the act. It cannot, therefore, help giving an unfairly favorable view of the existing measure. A consideration of this circumstance, as much as anything else, will, we should say, prevent people from going up to the Council Chamber to beard the lions in their den. Still, there is this to be said about the Stamp Act, which makes it desirable even to discuss what sort of rope shall be used in tying one's hind legs together. The Stamp Act is so rich in defects as to be not only defective in principle, but in detail as well. For instance, when a man at Swatow wanting to pay a bill at Hongkong sends his creditor an order on a correspondent here, that is a bill of exchange, requiring a fifty cent stamp, even if the amount to be paid is five dollars only. Again, sailors, and other persons in a similar position, wanting to send a small sum of money home to their friends, by a bill of exchange obtained at a bank, are cruelly pressed by the present regulations. As for the necessity of having a bill, drawn out of the colony, stamped before it is accepted, that appears to be a regulation inconsistent with the corresponding rule at home, even. No doubt, a formidable list of particular grievances could be put together by the Chamber of Commerce, independently of anything that body may wish to say about the principle of the Act.

The especial value, however, of such a letter to the commission as might be prepared by the Chamber would be that the principles of the act might be discussed in it, even though it would be known beforehand that the commission could not take any notice of such discussion. The letter of the Chamber of Commerce will be a public document, forming part of the history of the Hongkong Stamp Act. If it deals with the whole question au fond, its language will stand side by side with that of the commission; and should the Chamber duly enter a protest against the whole act, it would not be very easy for the commission to represent that the stamp ordinance is working well on the whole, and is unobjectionable to the community in principle. Hongkong is very long suffering and meek, all its dislike of disagreeable legislation being generally exhaled in private denunciations of the Government. Before the Stamp Act came into force, it was the intention,—the boldly expressed intention of a good many people at all events,—to use no Stamps, and stand the consequences. When the act was proclaimed as coming into operation, Stamps were used nevertheless. Ever since in spite of the maledictions they have occasioned they have been used regularly, those cases excepted in which they have been bona fide forgotten, which are not a few. The arguments which were used against the system at first, however, remain just as forcible as they ever were, and it is a plain duty with the Chamber of Commerce to put them forward again at an opportunity like the present. So far as the Chamber is concerned the opportunity is valuable. It may not be of the least use to individuals. There is no reasonable likelihood that the public will make any direct communications to the commission whatever. How such communications would be manipulated by the commission it would be impossible to foresee, but the Chamber may speak to the commission in such a manner that all persons interested in its utterances may hear them, and all persons will consequently be able to see for themselves the manner in which its observations are received.

UNLAWFUL POSSESSION.

An ill favoured looking Malay was charged with the unlawful possession of two pair of shoes. From the evidence of John Thomas, who described himself as a cook and steward, it appears that John was sleeping in a boarding-house down the town last night, but requiring in the morning to get up and go out, he found that his shoes had literally walked themselves off in the night. He accordingly sallied out to find his property, and discovered them in the possession of the Malay man above referred to, who had also placed another man in a similarly distressed situation by purloining his boots. This witness made his statement in English, with man flourishes. The next witness was the "gentleman belonging to the boots," and he was without exception the blackest black we ever saw. His statement was made in Arabic, and the interpreter for that language was obliged to give it in Hindoostanee to the Hindoostanee Interpreter, from whom the court got it in English. It was quite astonishing how much talking took place between the witness and the interpreters, when in the end six or seven words only served as an explanation to the magistrate. The gentleman ob-colour in the witness box was requested to try on the boots he claimed, and after much exertion he managed to insert his foot in one of the boots, but after all the outside of the boot was not blacker that the foot within. Mr. May fined the Malay man 10s., or 14 days.

AN AUDACIOUS THIEF.

One of the most bold-faced robberies we have heard of for some time was committed on the night of the 13th inst., by a man named Lee-a-sai. From the evidence of the poor woman robbed, it would appear that Mr. Lee-a-sai had endeavoured to, and successfully gained admission into the house as a lodger, but after he had resided there for some, his landlady, Man-a-kin, got rid of him, she having heard that his character was not quite right. Eight days after he had left, he returned suddenly, and was caught in the act of surreptitiously conveying away some Quilts, &c. It was the landlady herself who caught the vagabond, and she brought two of her lodgers, Leong-a-cheong a boatman, and Toong-a-tai, to prove the case. There being no defence, Mr. May sentenced the man to six months' imprisonment with hard labour, and at the end of that time to find two securities of $50 each, to be forthcoming to answer any charge for six months further, and more than the above, Mr. May said he should recommend the prisoner as a fit subject for deportation at the expiration of his term of imprisonment.

DARING ROBBERY.

On Saturday morning, as Mrs. Mary Howell was proceeding through the Central market, she was knocked down and robbed of about $100 in money and a gold albert pattern chain. Two Chinamen, who according to Mrs. Howell's statement looked on during the time she was being robbed, and did not assist, were taken into custody on Saturday, and will appear before one of the sitting magistrates to-day.

A VAGUE DEMAND.—There are few things more remarkable than the frequent disregard on the part of writers in public and in private of that specification of time and place which is so essential to the right understanding of the matter of which they write. Not long ago a Secretary of State sent to the public papers some information which would have been highly important if a date had not been omitted. The secretary of a public institution, about the same time, addressed a letter to all the papers calling attention to the advantages it afforded in supplying labour of a particular kind at a time when it was much wanted, but he omitted to indicate both the name and the locality of the institution. And now we have before us, in the agony column of the Daily Telegraph, another curious instance of this want of precision, the results of which it is terrible to anticipate:—"The young lady who arrived at Paddington by the Evening Express at 7 p.m., is requested to communicate with the gentleman who raised his hat to her at the distribution of luggage, as he has something of importance to communicate.—Address, &c. &c." Now, as no date is here given, we shudder to think of the number of young ladies arriving by the evening express who may be induced to answer such advertisements. For gentlemen to assist unprotected females, old and young, at the bewildering distribution of luggage at Paddington is no uncommon thing, and it may be presumed that, after receiving thanks for their chivalrous efforts, they raise their hats and depart. The advertiser, therefore, who has a soul above dates, may be answered by a wrong lady, and if by one we see no reason why not by half-a-dozen expectants.

OUR IRISH DEFENDERS.—Nearly five hundred smart young fellows, members of the London Irish Volunteers, were sworn in yesterday (Jan. 12th) as special constables, and supplied with those truncheons which are at once symbols of loyalty and very expressive warnings to all would-be disturbers of order. The event seemed to be one demanding more than usual notice; for, contrary to custom, the magistrate before whom the oath was administered addressed the applicants in a highly spirited and patriotic speech. The sentiments uttered by Mr. [illegible] were were as excellent as the [illegible] gallant audience, but the reason [illegible] a celebration took place is [illegible] one doubted the loyalty of [illegible] or their readiness to stand side by side with their fellow-citizens in the defence of order and in vindication of the law. The swearing in of so large a body en masse, however, was a significant demonstration of the men themselves, constituting a public reply to aspersions freely cast on a whole people by those with whom the wish was father to the unworthy thought. Irishmen might at any time have come forward singly, like their neighbours, and in many cases they have of course done so. But, since insinuations were thrown out, it was perhaps, just as well to give them the lie direct in a mode that no sympathiser with disorder and sedition could possibly misunderstand. Hence, while we feel no surprise, we experience much pleasure in adverting to the scene of Saturday, and we trust all Fenians and their abettors will mark, learn, and inwardly digest the useful lesson which it conveys.—Daily Telegraph.

Trial of Sir Culling Eardley for Bigamy.

In the Globe of Jan. 27th, the latest London paper to hand, we find the following report:—

Sir Culling Eardley was placed at the bar of the Central Criminal Court this day, to take his trial feloniously intermarrying with Mary Elizabeth Allen, at the district church of St. George's Hanover-square, his wife Emily Florence Magee, to whom he had been previously married at New York, in the United States of America, being alive.

This case appeared to create considerable interest on account of the position of the defendant, and the circumstances connected with the charge. Evidence was adduced to show that on the 12th of December, 1859, the defendant, being then Mr. Eardley, married Miss Emily Florence Magee at New York, and continued to live with that lady for some time afterwards, when a separation took place. In the first instance Sir Culling Eardley, the father of the defendant, was ignorant of the fact of the marriage having taken place, but when he became aware of the fact that his son had married a lady of position and respectability, he at once acknowledged her as his daughter, and made a settlement of £1,500 a year upon her. After the defendant came to the title by the death of his father, he seemed to have induced the prisoner to procure a reconciliation with his wife, but she refused to live with him again, and in September, 1867, the defendant contracted a second marriage with a lady named Allen, at St. George's Church, Hanover square. The marriage was advertised in the Times, and the father of defendant's first wife immediately commenced the present prosecution.

Mr. De Tracy Gould, a member of the American bar, practising in England, proved that the marriage in America was a perfectly legal ceremony.

Evidence having been given of the second marriage, Mr. M. Williams addressed the jury for the defendant.

The Recorder, in summing up the case to the jury, said that he really did not see any answer to the charge, or any facts in the case that would justify them in coming to the conclusion that the defendant had not committed the offence imputed to him.

The jury, after a short deliberation, returned a verdict of Guilty.

The Recorder, in passing sentence, said that in the absence of any information as to the circumstances connected with the second marriage, the Court must deal with the case as it stood. The defendant had deliberately committed a very grave offence, and one that was calculated to do serious injury to the person who was the victim of it. There did not appear to be any extenuation for his conduct, and the sentence he felt bound to pass upon him was that he be imprisoned and kept to hard labour for eighteen months.

The London Sempstresses.

The Daily Telegraph describes a remarkable New Year's Treat, given under the auspices of the Institution for the Employment of Needlewomen, in Hinde-street, Manchester-square, on the 10th January, to four hundred poor sempstresses.

The locality fixed upon for the entertainment was Buckingham-street, Portland-road, in the commodious halls of the Trinity Schools, organised by the Rev. Mr. Cadman. There were some pretty Christmas decorations in the shape of holly and evergreens; the walls were adorned with comfortable texts gaily illuminated; there was plenty of warmth and plenty of light; and at six o'clock p.m. the four hundred needlewomen sat down to an ample and substantial repast. It was a "Meat Tea," and even old Cobbett might have withdrawn his gibes about the "cat-lap" and the "tea-tackle" had he been able to see the infusion of the fragrant leaf supplemented by a goodly dinner of Roast Beef and Plum Pudding. In accordance with the newly revived and most admirable custom, the guests were waited upon by ladies and gentlemen. Perfect order and unmingled harmony prevailed, and the poor people seemed most thoroughly to enjoy the banquet prepared for them. Heaven knows, to many of their number it was a banquet indeed. They may have dreamt of beef and pudding for days, and for days to come they may dream of the realisation of their vision. Do you know how much these needlewomen—paid by the institution at rates far higher than those accorded for slopwork—can earn? At most eight shillings a week. For less than a hundred pence every seven days not much beef can be bought between Saturday and Saturday!

When the four hundred had plentifully fed they were marshalled on benches in the largest school-room, and another portion of the evening's entertainment commenced. There were ventriloquism; there was a magic lantern; there was sacred and there was secular singing, and appropriate addresses were delivered at the beginning and at the end of the proceedings by two reverend gentlemen, Mr. Forrest and Mr. Cadman. The women seemed very patient, very quiet, very docile; and, indeed, according to the admirable Lady Superintendent, Miss Ellen Barlee, the authoress of "Our Homeless Poor"—the work which first called attention to the necessity for such a institution as the present—they are always quiet and well behaved. Rarely have we looked on a more poverty-stricken, careworn-looking, and dejected assemblage of countenances. The bountiful meal, the warm room, the shows and music, the kindness of their hosts, had cheered them up a little; but it was easy to see that, for six days out of the seven, life was a very sad and serious thing to them. They were all decently clad; but they had a pinched and "peaking" look. With the exception of half a score ruddy young lasses, who did "machine work" and so earned better wages, the four hundred were mature and middle-aged women. Many of them were old. They seemed but a feeble folk, poor quivering osiers and aspens of humanity, liable to be swayed and buffeted by every blast. It was but a little that they could do. "Plain work" summed up their entire capacity. They were not "cutters" or "fancy" hands. They could just saw the parts of a shirt together. Numbers of them, we were told, were the widows or the deserted wives of mechanics; many had large families; many more had been, from youth, single and self-dependent women. We are apt to laugh sometimes at "old maids;" but there is nothing very provocative of hilarity in the spinster of the humblest classes—too "plain" to find a husband, even among bachelors of her own degree—illiterate, unfriended, and forlorn. These are not the kind of women who prefer "flaunting sin" to honest industry, or who fill penitent homes. They are meek, decent, harmless beings, whose entire energies are devoted to the acquisition of daily bread, but who are constantly fain to cry out in agony—although they may never have read a line of Tom Hood—that bread should be so dear, and flesh and blood so cheap.

The usual price paid by the "slop" houses for making a shirt is 3½d.; but the Institution for Needlewomen, which takes in Government work only, has been able, during the last seven years, to raise the allowance to 9d per shirt, with the additional help that the stitching is done by machinery, which is worth, in the sempstress's estimation of time, 2d. a shirt more. For some years past, the War Office has given the Needlewoman's Institution an annual contract for fifty thousand soldiers' shirts; but the number has now been reduced to fifteen thousand, and notice has been given that, next April, the contract will be withdrawn altogether, in order to supply the soldiers' wives at Woolwich with employment. The managers of the institution have been thrown into a state of consternation bordering on despair by these cruel tidings; and it has become necessary to exert all the influence which the needlewomen's friends can bring to bear on the Government, to induce it, if that be possible, to reconsider a hasty determination. The War Office is doubtless actuated by a laudable desire to ameliorate the condition of the wives of our soldiers; but it is as well to bear in mind that those women are the wives of men in active employment, and in the receipt of wages, whereas the Hinde-street sempstresses are entirely self-dependent. The soldier's wife very frequently goes abroad with her husband. She often gets the officers' washing; she is usually a bustling, robust woman, in the prime of life; at all events, while her husband wears the Queen's scarlet, she cannot become utterly destitute. The poor London needlewomen, whose case is so eloquently pleaded by Miss Barlee, and to help whom she has so indefatigably laboured, will have no refuge, if the withdrawal of the Government contract be persisted in, but the workhouse. They are too old to emigrate; they are not fit to go out to service; they can only sew; and if the Government sewing be taken away from them, to the union they must infallibly go. Miss Barlee cannot take in private slop-work. The wages are simply starvation. Shirt-making at 3d. or 4½d. a piece will not keep body and soul together. Already, by the reduction of the Government contract, numbers of needlewomen have been thrown out of employment; the society's income is reduced, and its power of usefulness cramped. In order to meet, in some measure, this diminution of revenue, a dressmaking department has been added to the institution, for which custom is earnestly solicited; a large amount of private work and some shop orders, at decent rates and remuneration, have been executed during the past year; there is a well supported charity fund; at Christmas, seasonable donations, in food and clothes, are made to the needlewomen; and every appeal of the institution through the press has been liberally met by the benevolent public; but Miss Barlee does not wish to be at the head of four hundred beggars. She knows what Political Economy is, and her ambition is to organise as many hundred workers as she can find employment for. Hitherto, the work has been efficiently and honestly done. Out of four hundred thousand Government shirts given out to these—the very poorest of all poor women—to the made up at their own homes, not fifty have been either pawned or lost.

Vesuvius.

(From the "Saturday Review.")

Vesuvius is a mountain higher than Snowdon, but rather lower than Ben Nevis. It is double-peaked; the eastern summit is at present the lowest, and, as a volcano, inactive; the western or highest eminence is the source of eruptions every few years. These two peaks are separated by a wide valley, the level of which is about half as high as the highest peak; and the eastern eminence, the inactive one, is in reality rather a ridge than a peak, and is in form like the segment of a circle, giving an observer the idea, which is very probably true, that this circle once formed the vast crater of the volcano which, by the great eruption that destroyed Pompeii, broke down the western wall, and raised a new summit in its stead. Just the same thing has apparently happened in the volcanic region of Teneriffe, and has certainly happened repeatedly in the volcanic mountains of the moon; and some day it will very possibly happen in the now almost extinct Solfatara, the tiny volcano of which is situated almost in the ring of the ancient crater. However this may be, one may look in vain to discover otherwise, in the present arrangement the mountain, the great cavity in which the gladiators under Spartacus took refuge, and to which the Roman army was forced to lay a regular siege. What is seen is, on the left as one ascends, a high dark mass; on the right, an easy ascent for about two thousand feet then a level, or almost level plateau, and then a sharp steep cone rising two thousand feet more, and terminating usually in a broad crater many hundred yards wide, but at present in another still steeper cone rising out of the extreme vertex of the mountain, and formed entirely of ashes. The mountain is, at the time at which we are writing, covered on the south side by snow; on the north and west it presents such a sight that an Englishman who has heard of it, and who happens to have a few weeks of the winter at his disposal, will not be much surprised if he find himself at ten o'clock some moonlight night starting, with a guide beside him, through the vineyards at the mountain's base.

An eruption of Vesuvius is seen to very much greater advantage by night than by day. But by the night it is very difficult to induce the guides to ascend the higher cone; and though the chief phenomena may be thoroughly seen by the side of the lava streams as they descend the side, the sight of these rather stimulates the curiosity than satisfies it; and he is a fortunate explorer who can manage to place himself at the very summit either during the night itself, or when the evening has sufficiently advanced to allow the glare of the volcano to be seen in all its glory. The two objects may be attained in two separate ascents, but, for convenience of description, we may imagine them as combined in one. We are travelling, then, through the vineyards early on a bright January evening; the moon is clear, but a tremendous wind from the east has set in, and in front, as we mount, the volumes of smoke are rolling away towards the sea. The appearance which the mountain presents is this:—Two gigantic arms of fire seem to rise out of the lava bed in front of us, a mile or two higher up, meet in the air, and disappear under a canopy of red tossing smoke. They are the two principal streams of lava which are making their way down the face of the central cone, right towards us as we ascend; but they meet when they reach the half-way plateau which we mentioned before, and separate again into two branches, the size and length of which vary from day to day. Seen from below, these two great fiery arms light up the night. On one side the full moon is silvering the Bay of Naples, and on the other the wind is hurrying the clouds over two glowing currents, which light them up and redden them with a lurid fierceness as they pass. We move on, climbing over the stones, and soon bear off to the left across fields of cold lava. Here it lies black and dead, the fruits of old eruptions; mile after mile one may follow it through plains and almost seas of ugly blackness, rolled into rounded masses, tossed up in crumbling peaks, here and there twisted and curled into curious rope-like coils. A little further on, and higher up, and the surface is gently warm. Jets of hot air issue from holes in the mass, with sometimes puffs of steam; the old dead lava is not quite dead, after all. We penetrate further, and now have nearly reached the plateau, when the current forks the second time; and we turn now to the right, and scramble over some more hot lava beds; and at last we climb some stones which partly hid the view, and find that we are standing in front of a river, three miles long, of liquid fire.

The heat is tremendous. To stand near a stream of lava and to look at it are very different things. One cannot even approach it without being fairly scorched. The stream itself is bordered by ridges of stones, parallel to one another, like the moraines of a glacier; happy he who passes them without stumbling. As one mounts the side, the stones fall away red hot from their places; the stick which one pushes into the crevices comes out charred, or even bursts into flame; one falls forward, and rises with one's gloves scorched. Close by the river of lava itself it is impossible to remain, except where it is nearly dying out at the lower extremity. A hasty glance into the torrent is all that, without the courage of a Cranmer, one can fairly allow oneself. Patience, however, will now and then discover some post of vantage, from which at a little distance the fiery flood can be surveyed in safety, and even with moderate comfort. It is a small stream, seldom more and generally less than two or three yards in breadth; at the spot where we are standing, where about two-thirds of its downward course are completed, it is moving at the rate of about a mile an hour. Lower down this will gradually become slower, the scoriæ on its surface will spread and grow more black, and at last it will cease to flow as a viscous stream, and will roll over itself, so to speak, in a series of miniature cascades, which finally cool down into what one might almost fancy a staircase of lava. From the whole of this, while we are looking, vast clouds of vapour are continually rolling off, vivid beyond description, and from time to time the thunder of the volcano is heard from above, as it hurls up stones and ashes from the apex. Sights and sounds alike are full, not indeed of terror, for there is no danger in the case, but of real grandeur and majesty. And when the eye is tired with view, on such a night as that which we are describing, it may turn away to the quiet bay, the white villages in their midnight sleep, and thirty miles off the Apennines, with their snowy tops white and clear under the moon. Yet the best sight of all is further on. We leave the lava stream, bear away to the left through the valley which separates the two peaks, thus avoiding the fine ashes which blow annoyingly into the eyes at every step, and securing an easier ascent; and after a two hours' climb, are at the very top. The eruption has filled the crater, and we may walk safely over the place where two months ago the great gulf yawned. And now we see the virgin lava actually issuing forth, still brighter and hotter than below, and flowing doubly as fast in its channel. We are close to the very centre of the volcano itself. A small round hill of ashes, two or three hundred yards in diameter, crowns the mountain. From this there rise enormous volumes of steam, now regularly, now in mighty discharges which shake the ground where we stand; and close beside it spreads another volume as black as smoke. This last is the same steam mixed with ashes; and in its dark background, every few moments, there dart up, with a noise like that of artillery, bright red fountains of stones and ashes, tossed up three hundred feet into the air, and falling back into the bosom of the mountain or on the sides of the conical hill from which they rise. Nothing can surpass the grandeur of this majestic column. From the fierce glow of the lava as it rushes down before us, and the white gushes of steam, the fury of which shakes the mountain and thunders away to Naples, the eye turns with even greater awe to the towering black volume beside them in which the fiery rain of the cinders seems imbedded. At times a sulphurous cloud, almost intolerable for the moment, beats down upon us with a gust of wind, and then, again, another friendly gust carries it away. There is even here, as below, no personal danger, unless indeed a new lava stream should suddenly open under our feet; but the excitement of the scene is such as needs no personal considerations to render it as intense as human nature can wish.

FRENCH PROSE.—Now, of all modern intellects, that of France is most like to the Greek in the love of artistic form; in the passion for definiteness of thought and figure, and in the habit of pushing a principle to what seems the logical conclusion, so that the thinker's eye shall be soothed by the artistic completeness of the argumentative lines, and not shocked by those irregularities of compromise which the essentially English mind sees without discomfort. That measured beauty of form which gives a supreme charm to French prose, and that air of logical rigour which marks French speculation, come from the same impulse. Art means beauty set in life like order; philosophy means principles set in logical order; and both result from the passion for completeness, or the horror of an inharmonious line. Between Kant, rounding off the limits within which the intellect can work scientifically, and Goethe, clothing the passions of life with the artistic unity of "Faust," there is little surface affinity; yet in reality both minds obey the same rule; each says in his own way that, if we only look deep enough, we shall see a rounded completeness in what seems a shapeless mass to the eye, unpurified by the euphrasy and rue of thought and melody. The passion for completeness may indeed exist without the faculties for gathering in the materials that can afford a completeness which shall be real. In France that passion has been stronger than those faculties; hence, with all its flowing lines, her best work has a certain thinness beside the best work of Germany and England; her beauty is not so highly organized as the beauty of life; she has no Shakespeare and no Goethe.—Fraser's Magazine.

NERVOUS MEN.—A Nervous man is with many a frequent subject of derision; yet there is perhaps in this world hardly a creature deserving of more pity than a nervous man. The irrelevancy of his conduct is melancholy. His is that keenest misfortune of human life—the consciousness of many mistakes without the power of rectifying them. In his mind there is an enduring sense of his own inefficiency. He presents the mournful spectacle of a human being whose judgment is fettered, as it were, by a network of highly-wrought nerves. Wanting intellectual control, his legs, arms, and tongue are perpetually leading him into some kind of embarrassment. If he comes into a room, ten chances to one that he falls over the very act of giving his name to the servant; or he will enter with such nervous rapidity as to make him at once the Eyethus of the minute—provoking witticisms from wigs, titters from girls, and sympathy from nervous people like himself. He cannot hand a glass of wine or a cup of tea without upsetting it. He converses in jerks, now with an incoherent volubility, now with a slowness that makes the intervening pauses embarrassing to the listener. The spectacle of a nervous man dancing is a study which no lover of observation would willingly forego. Watch him in a quadrille, his hands, if they are not forcing each other's gloves yet further down upon the fingers, are wandering furtively about his person, like the dove of Noah that could not find a resting-place. He receives the most harmless question from his partner with an air of dubiousness, as if he thought to discern within it the lurking element of some facetious irony at the expense of his nerves. Then comes the quick, abrupt answer, the general jerk of legs, arms, and head, the rapid question, and perhaps a sense of overwhelming confusion because in his nervousness he has neglected to commence the figure which the vis-à-vis has called upon him to begin. If there be a purgatory for nervous men, we should pronounce it to be a square dance. A waltz is bad enough, but the exertion warms him up to the enjoyment. There is a reassuring sense in his mind of his being unnoticed amidst the whirling throng. Could you only contrive, however, to whisper to one of these nervous waltzers that he is being watched you would then witness a sight which if you are malicious, you would probably enjoy. He will be almost certain to fall—to trip over the trailing skirt of some sweeping dancer, and bring himself and perhaps others with a crash and a cry to the ground. This sphere, however, of the nervous man's operations is very limited, and can only be indicated as the source of some enjoyment to the malicious spectator.—Leader.

BREAK DOWN OF THE "[illegible]"

By the Arratoon Apcar, which came in on Saturday, we learn that the Reiver, which left Calcutta for the Straits and China on the 22nd ult., was compelled to put back after having proceeded about 20 miles from that port, owing to an accident to her machinery. Her cargo was to be brought on by the B. I. S. N. Co.'s Scotia, which was to leave about the 6th current.

The Arratoon Apcar was delayed three days in Calcutta, owing to the Neap tides preventing her from being undocked.

The following are the latest Telegrams to hand per steamer Arratoon Apcar.

It is also stated that Yedo Castle has been taken, or besieged by an organized force. In the House of Commons yesterday, Sir Stafford Northcote stated that the Government of Egypt had afforded every facility to the Abyssinian Expedition. Sir Stafford also said that on recent movements of the Egyptian Government indicating an intention to send troops into Abyssinia, representations had been made to the Viceroy of Egypt, who had declared that the reinforcements were exaggerated; but promised to recall a portion. Sir Stafford also stated that no information had been received as to the alleged advance of the Egyptian troops; nor of the arrival of Theodore at Magdala. He also stated that the amount of monthly freight (of vessels employed in the expedition) was exaggerated.

COMMERCIAL INTELLIGENCE.

Hongkong, Saturday Evening.

Market for Bengal Drug remained very quiet until after the arrival of the steamer Arratoon Apcar, from Calcutta, with dates to 27th ult., having on board about 1,310 chests, and reporting the return to Calcutta of the steamer Reiver disabled, when some excitement prevailed in the market. Transactions to some extent were made, and while New Patna was changing hands at $695, and even as high as $702½ on cash and credit terms, with delivery as soon as landed, certain speculators, who seldom or ever receive a single consignment of Opium, appeared in the market making sales at $687½ to $690 on three weeks' time. Sales of New Benares have been effected at $690 to $692½ to the natives. The steamer Scotia of about 1,200 tons, an auxiliary boat of small power has been chartered, it is said for about a lakh of rupees, to bring on the cargo of the Reiver. She was expected to leave Calcutta about the 5th inst., and is not at all possible to arrive within the next week, in which case, the market cannot but advance further, as large speculative sales have been made at $658½ to $675, the buyers having the option to demand the drug immediately after the first week, say about the 21st. The demand from the native sources is very good, and it is not unlikely that over a thousand chests will be required during the next eight or ten days. A limited amount of business has been done in Malwa, a lot of 11 chests were placed at $682½ on cash terms, of which only 5 chests were passed, and the rest rejected as inferior drug. The natives have been paying $685 and $692½ on credit terms, with reduction in weight of about a pound to a catty per picul, large holders, however, have not at all been meeting the market at such low rates, though there are telegraphic advices from Bombay of large supplies by the next mail, notwithstanding a further advance and high prices ruling for it there. To-day's closing rates are—New Patna $695 to $702½, old Patna, quoted, $670 to $680, New Benares $690 to $692½, old, quoted, $670 to $680, Malwa $682½ to $692½.

The 2nd Opium Sale of this year was held at Calcutta on the 10th ultimo, when 2,300 chests Patna and 1,700 chests Benares were sold at the following rates:—

	Highest	Lowest	Average.
Patna sold	Rs. 1,420	Rs. 1,405	Rs. 1,408.13.10½
Benares „	Rs. 1,415	Rs. 1,390	Rs. 1,399. 2 8½

The result shows an advance on the averages of last sale of Rs. 26. 3. 7½ for Patna and Rs. 34. 4. 11½ for Benares.

There has been considerable fluctuation in Opium after the sale, but on the 31st of February the drug was quoted Patna Rs. 1,410, Benares Rs. 1,400 per chest.

There has not been much doing in the other departments of trade to day, with the exception of some excitement in the Cotton market. Manufactured goods have been extremely dull, and the only sales reported include 53 bales 16/24 Cotton Yarn at $115 to $117, 1,000 pieces 6 lbs. T-Cloths, chop dollars, at $2.00, and 500 pieces, 7 lbs. Grey Shirtings at $2.30. The market for Raw Cotton was firm during the early part of the day, with considerable sales at a slight advance on Friday's rates, but after the arrival of the Calcutta steamer with news of higher rates there and very large purchases for the English market, some excitement prevailed, and sales were made of best Bombay at $21.00, and of best Bengal at $20.00. Sales reported embrace about 950 bales Bombay at $17.00 to $21.00, and 415 bales Bengal at $14.00 to $15.25. Produce is rather quiet, and not much doing. A good business has been done to-day in Hotel and Steamboat Shares; of the former large sales have been made at 25 per cent. discount, an advance of 5 per cent. since yesterday, and there are a few small sellers at 30 per cent. of the latter considerable business has been done at par. Old Bank are very firm, with buyers at 14½ and 15 premium, and one or two lots of new have been done at 3 premium. There are sellers of Whampoa Dock at 15 and 5 for old and new respectively. Exchange is easy for buyer, and shows some signs of improvement.

COMMERCIAL INTELLIGENCE.

Hongkong, Saturday Evening.

Market for Bengal Drug remained very quiet until after the arrival of the steamer Arratoon Apcar, from Calcutta, with dates to 27th ult., having on board about 1,310 chests, and reporting the return to Calcutta of the steamer Reiver disabled, when some excitement prevailed in the market. Transactions to some extent were made, and while New Patna was changing hands at $695, and even as high as $702¼ on cash and credit terms, with delivery as soon as landed certain speculators, who seldom or ever receive a single consignment of Opium, appeared in the market, making sales at $687½ to $690 on three weeks' time. Sales of New Benares have been effected at $690 to $692½ to the natives. The steamer Scotia of about 1,200 tons, an auxiliary boat of small power has been chartered, it is said for about a lakh of rupees, to bring on the cargo of the Reiver. She was expected to leave Calcutta about the 5th inst., and it is not at all possible to arrive within the next week, in which case, the market cannot but advance further, as large speculative sales have been made at $658¾ to $675, the buyers having the option to demand the drug immediately after the first week, say about the 21st. The demand from the native sources is very good, and it is not unlikely that over a thousand chests will be required during the next eight or ten days. A limited amount of business has been done in Malwa, a lot of 11 chests were placed at $482½ on cash terms, of which only 5 chests were passed, and the rest rejected as inferior drug. The natives have been paying $685 and $692½ on credit terms, with reduction in weight of about a pound to a catty per picul, large holders, however, have not at all been meeting the market at such low rates, though there are telegraphic advices from Bombay of large supplies by the next mail, notwithstanding a further advance and high prices ruling for it there. To-days closing rates are—New Patna $695 to $702¼, old Patna quoted, $670 to $680, New Benares $690 to $692½, old, quoted, $670 to $680, Malwa $682½ to 692½.

The 2nd Opium Sale of this year was held at Calcutta on the 10th ultimo, when 2,300 chests Patna and 1,700 chests Benares were sold at the following rates:—

	Highest	Lowest	Average.
Patna sold	Rs. 1,420	Rs. 1,405	Rs. 1,408.13.10½
Benares „	Rs. 1,415	Rs. 1,390	Rs. 1,399 .2 .8½

The result shows an advance on the averages of last sale of Rs. 26. 3. 7½ for Patna and Rs. 31. 4. 11½ for Benares.

There has been considerable fluctuation in Opium after the sale, but on the 21st of February the drug was quoted Patna Rs. 1,410, Benares Rs. 1,400 per chest.

There has not been much doing in the other departments of trade to-day, with the exception of some excitement in the Cotton market. Manufactured goods have been extremely dull, and the only sales reported include 53 bales 16/24 Cotton Yarn at $115 to $117; 1,000 pieces 6 lbs. T-Cloths, chop dollars, at $2.00, and 500 pieces 7 lbs. Grey Shirtings at $2.30. The market for Raw Cotton was firm during the early part of the day, with considerable sales at a slight advance on Friday's rates, but after the arrival of the Calcutta steamer with news of higher rates there and very large purchases for the English market, some excitement prevailed, and sales were made of best Bombay at $21.00, and of best Bengal at $20.00. Sales reported embrace about 930 bales Bombay at $17.00 to $21.00, and 415 bales Bengal at $14.00 to $15.25. Produce is rather quiet, and not much doing. A good business has been done to-day in Hotel and Steamboat Shares; of the former large sales have been made at 25 per cent. discount, an advance of 5 per cent. since yesterday, and there are a few small sellers at 30 per cent. of the latter considerable business has been done at par. Old Bank are very firm, with buyers at 14 and 15 premium, and one or two lots of new have been done at 3 premium. There are sellers of Whampoa Dock at 15 and 5 for old and new respectively. Exchange is easy for buyer, and shows some signs of improvement.

Prepayment of the postage is compulsory in each case.
Special attention is directed to the following Rules and Regulations, which will be strictly enforced:—

AS REGARDS BOOKS.
A Book Packet may contain any number of separate Books, Almanacks, Maps, or Prints, and any quantity of paper, vellum or parchment (to the exclusion of letters whether sealed or open); and the Books, Maps, Paper, &c., may be either printed, written, or plain, or any mixture of the three.
All legitimate binding, mounting, or covering of the same or of a portion thereof, will be allowed, whether such binding be loose or attached; as also rollers in the case of prints, markers (whether of paper or otherwise) in the case of books, and in short whatever is necessary for the safe transmission of literary or artistic matter, or usually appertains thereto.
Every book packet must be either without a cover, or in a cover open at the ends or sides. It must not contain any letter, open or sealed, nor any sealed enclosure whatever.
No packet must exceed two feet in length, breadth or depth, exceeding these dimensions it cannot be forwarded through the Post.

AS REGARDS PATTERNS.
They must be of no intrinsic value. This rule excludes all articles of a saleable nature, and indeed, whatever may have a value of its own, apart from its mere use as a pattern; and the quantity of any material sent ostensibly as a pattern must not be so great that it can fairly be considered as having on this ground an intrinsic value.
There must be no writing or marks other than the address of the person for whom the packet is intended, a trade mark and numbers, and prices of the articles; otherwise the Packet will be detained or forwarded charged as an unpaid letter.
The Patterns must be sent in covers open at the ends, so as to be easy of examination. Samples however, of seeds, drugs, and so forth, which cannot be sent in open covers, may be enclosed in bags of linen or other material, tied at the neck; bags so closed that they cannot readily be opened, even although they be transparent, must not be used for this purpose. Non compliance with this rule will also subject the packet to be detained or forwarded as an unpaid letter.
The decision of the Postmaster General as to the eligibility of any Packet, pattern, or sample contained therein, to be forwarded under these regulations, will be final and conclusive.
The Packets or the contents thereof must not contain any inclosure, sealed or otherwise closed against inspection.
In all other respects the general regulations of the Book Post will apply to the Pattern Post. Under these regulations, in order to prevent any interruption to the regular transmission of letters, a Packet of Patterns may, when it is necessary, be kept back for the following Mail, by which, in the ordinary course, it would be forwarded.

Postmaster General.

Extracts.

Out of the Shadow.

Welcome her back to the board and the hearth!
Long hath she languished in sorrow and pain;
Sad was the household and hushed was the mirth—
Let the house ring with sweet laughter again.
Long hath the death angel hung o'er thy home;
Now he hath fled let the joy spirits come;
Sunshine and music shall brighten thy track;
Home shall be home again—welcome her back.

Soon shall the pallid cheek flush like the rose;
Soon will the languid heart strengthen and thrill;
Soon shall the crimson tide, melting the snows,
Rush through the veins till they darken and fill.
She will be hopeful and cheerful ere long;
Daily her step will grow steady and strong;
Out from the clouds of death, gloomy and black,
Welcome her back again—welcome her back.

Out of the shadow into the sun;
Out of the sunshine into the shade;
Thus doth the life-stream of destiny run;
Happy are they who are never afraid.
Strong is the hand that hath guided thy bark
Into the sun again out of the dark;
Music and laughter shall brighten thy track;
Home shall be home again—welcome her back.—Public Opinion.

Parrots.

(From the "Spectator.")

There is a legend that the accomplished architect of the Museum at Oxford left directions that the design to be sculptured out in the arch over the doorway should be a sort of arabesque of apes, owls, and parrots' heads—which he evidently thought in some sense symbolical of the Heads of Houses. In this design the first would, we suppose, have represented the general wisdom, the second the philosophy, and the last the philology of the University. The sarcasm was very likely a myth; but if the leading men at Oxford had voluntarily carried it out, by way of self-warning, they would have shown how wide the analogy really was of the mark by their very readiness to admit the danger that it might cease to be so. The fear of jungling out phrases like a parrot, is just about the only effectual safeguard against the danger of doing so, and the only absolute gulf of distinction between the human talker and the bird. No parrot can be absolutely denied all glimmer of insight into the meaning of what is says with so much grotesque variation of expression; but no parrot certainly entertains the least dread of repeating as a mere form of words that to which it attaches no meaning. On the contrary, parrots certainly regard the power of repeating words they do not in the least understand as a great achievement, in which they take immense pride. Man, so long as he deserves the name, retains a certain sense of the subordination of language; while parrots, though they seem far from independent of the law of the association which connects the two, evidently take pride primarily in their command of words, and only stumble on the grain inside the ear incidentally, occasionally, and indeed, unconsciously, as the child which has played ball with his oranges all his infancy may accidentally discover that the orange contains something nice to eat. If such a child were utterly to fail to draw from this discovery any inference at all as to the possession of the same edible pulp in the next and all future oranges with which it might meet, except wherever some accidental circumstance in individual cases should force this same fact on its attention,—if it should continue, throughout life to regard oranges exclusively as yellow balls, though connecting an agreeable flavour with a few stray individuals of the class,—it would, we imagine, show precisely that kind and degree of mental deficiency in relation to oranges which all parrots show at all times in relation to human language. Parrots, apparently, prize the art of speech as much or more than men,—only they never get beyond their pride and delight in correct articulation; and if by chance, as undoubtedly happens now and then, they cannot help associating some one word with a thing, just as they associate the sight of the table-cloth with food, it never suggests to them that all other words have a like power, and, therefore, never guides them to the art of conversation. It is certain that if the dog had the same power of articulation which the parrot has, he would be able to talk rationally on a few easy subjects with men,—for he clearly does pick up very fast the meaning of a great number of words, and, as far as we can tell, respects language, so far as he respects it at all, only for the meaning which he manages to connect with it. Of course that may partly be because he cannot articulate, which makes him study more humbly the meanings of the words his master uses. What makes the parrot so instructive and amusing is, that words mount into its head, and so far turn it that the bird has generally no mind left for their meaning. There is something really astonishing in the fact that, with sight and hearing so quick, and so evident a faculty of association as the parrot has,—in other words, with all the apparatus which, according to one school of philosophy, suffices even for human progress,—it should stick fast in the art of vocalization, and never proceed in its education beyond the accomplishment of uttering words and remembering them without relation to things. There is no more striking piece of irony in Nature that the perfect happiness and equanimity of a parrot living, in a cage of perhaps eight times its own size, a thoroughly active and useless life, which extends usually beyond the limit,—often, it is said, to double the limit,—of human life, and the mainspring of whose happiness appears to be the mastery which it has attained of the husks of thought, together with the knack of never caring to get inside them. Day after day, for perhaps eighty or a hundred,—it is said sometimes even a hundred and fifty—years, or more, the creature begins afresh its little stock of words and phrases, sings a few notes in imitation of the thrush or the blackbird and breaks off at the first bar; barks like all the neighbouring dogs in succession, and mews like the cats; climbs about its cage repeating its acquired phrases in all conceivable varieties of tone and voice,—phrases which usually turn on the name of "Polly" as a sort of permanent axis of egoistic interest,—squawks for its meals, or sometimes even from a sheer tyrannical sense of the annoyance which that most discordant of all earthly sounds creates; titters a little with ladylike gentility now and then, as if it were tittering behind its hand, or swears like the coarsest of troopers if the occasion seem more specially inopportune; employs itself in unloosing the ties in which its seed is kept, and dashing the said seed ruthlessly on the floor; opens its doors once or twice in the day, and uses its liberty only to climb about outside its cage as it had previously climbed about inside it; sleeps, and wakes up from sleep to talk to itself in softer and more romantic tones, as if it had been at least dreaming of a meaning to its words; and so, with little illness and no apparent seasons of depressed spirits, babbles away while generation after generation of mortal trouble passes under its keen, unreflective notice, outliving man by mere virtue of the superior equanimity and economy of nervous power which it owes to its preference for words over meanings, and for the externally-imitating to the recollecting and recombining side of memory.

WHITE GUNPOWDER.—M. Schultze, a retired Prussian captain of artillery, has been for the last few days in communication with the Minister of War here, concerning a new gunpowder he has invented, and which he calls white powder—poudre blanche. The experiments with this new material have been highly satisfactory, and the sanguine suppose it will quite supersede the old-fashioned gunpowder; it is especially applicable to rifled arms, as it leaves no residue, while its projective force greatly exceeds that of ordinary kinds. I hear that neither saltpetre, charcoal, nor sulphur, enter into the manufacture of white powder. It would seem that the Germans have a genius for inventing explosive combustibles.—Letter from Paris.

IT may amuse, if not interest your readers says a Paris correspondent, to know that one Frenchman out of each 556 wears the Legion of Honour, and that is what is termed being distinguished.

THE following lines on hippophagy come from the pen of that perennial joker, Mr. Charles Mathews:—

"If horseflesh won't suffice to feel the masses,
The next resource will certainly be asses;
And Heaven only knows where that will end!
Some people won't have left a single friend."
